

STEPS TAKEN TOWARD REFERENDUM VOTE ON SEWER RENT FEE

City Council Gets Notice Opponents Are Circulating Petitions.

ment of a proposed referendum on the recently enacted rental legislation, which will halt plans of city officials' election about Oct. 1, reached city council last night. It was announced with filing of a certified copy of the petition by Auditor Elmer Shaw, the initial step in referendum. The certificate was filed by Walter D. Moore, attorney for a group of Marion residents interested in repealing the ordinance which would assess all property owners a minimum of $4.

They are circulating petitions calling for the referendum, said today. The movement, he said, was instigated by 30 to 40 people who are defraying the legal expense. The group is not organized, according to Mr. Moore, who divulged the names of those who instigated the action years ago when city council considered similar legislation. A group circulated petitions against the proposed ordinance, he said. At that time, property owners voted in the form of petition to council and it was dropped, he added. ought it was a dead issue in the present council at the present sewer rental vote, he said. Passage of the measure brought immediate for a referendum and the group has eight solicitors circulating petitions, he added.

The solicitors, who are working for compensation of property owners against the rental plan, Mr. Moore said. Solicitors already have obtained 800 signatures; 10 percent of the voters in the last general election, to make the measure a certainty, he said.

8,900 Pupils Expected in County: City Buildings To Open Sept. 14. St. Mary and County Sept. 8.

September will bring the beginning of the daily trek to classes for an estimated 8,900 pupils of Marion city and county schools, and end the summer-long vacation of approximately 350 faculty members.

Marion public schools will open Sept. 14, St. Mary Marion St. Mary and the county schools will begin classes Sept. 8 with some of the latter taking off sessions the previous day.

School administrators are busy ironing out last minute details for the beginning of the 1942-43 term and expect to round out their staffs this week and next with the appointment of teachers to fill several remaining vacancies.

Increase Expected. Officials in the city and county anticipate a slight increase in enrollment due to the influx of workers in war industries, although they are hesitant to estimate how many additional pupils may register for classes. The school attendance is not expected to increase in proportion to the large number of war workers who have come to make Marion their home in the last several

JAPS GIVE UP CHINA GAINS

Chiang's Headquarters Predict Tokyo Attack in Different Direction.

By The Associated Press

Chinese dispatches said today that Japan's invasion armies were withdrawing from China's east coast provinces to prepare "another thrust" elsewhere—possibly an attack on Russian Siberia, India or Australia.

In Chungking, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's war capital, informed quarters agreed that some big-scale revision of Japanese plans had prompted the enemy to withdraw territory in Chekiang and Kiangsu provinces.

A Chinese army spokesman said the Japanese were withdrawing between 50,000 and 60,000 troops from the two provinces—about half the original invasion force—and abandoning cities after city to Gen. Chiang's armies.

The China Times, appealing to the allies "not to sit still waiting to be attacked," urged a general United Nations offensive to thwart Japan's new strategy which most observers forecast would develop in an attack on Siberia at Russia's back door.

Chinese headquarters announced the recapture of Linchuan (Fuchow), second biggest Japanese base in Kiangsi province, and said another Chinese force was attacking within 20 miles of Nanchang, main enemy base in the province.

Chinese troops were reported also to have recaptured Lushung in Kiangsi province, and to have advanced within six miles of the important Chekiang base of Chihshien.

The opening day program for Marion public schools will begin at 8 a.m. with faculty members meeting in their respective buildings. The doors will open at 8 a.m. for pupils and the regular schedule will be carried out in the city's high school, three junior high schools and 11 elementary buildings. A citywide meeting of teachers will be held after the schools have been in operation several days.

Germans Mass Tanks In Drive On Stalingrad BRITISH URGE SPEEDY ATTACK AGAINST AXIS

Huge Force Reported on Eastern Bank of Don: Situation Is Serious for Important Russian Industrial City.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Aug. 25.—The Germans massed large forces of tanks on the eastern bank of the Don before Stalingrad today while dive-bombers swarmed over the city and paratroopers descended on the Don and Caucasus areas with anti-tank guns and motorcycles to assist further the already-precarious Red army positions.

A front-line dispatch said the Germans had been able to concentrate large masses of men and machines across the Don.

It said the Nazis brought up reserves during the night and attacked at dawn tanks being followed by men with automatic rifles while planes rained down "many tons of bombs."

The first wave was turned back, but a half-hour later more bombers appeared and another charge began. In hard hand-to-hand fighting, the Red army stuck to its trenches and refused to break, this dispatch declared.

Night fighting in that sector was featured by rocket and tracer bullets streaking across the sky while German shells bombs screamed.

An account to Pravda, Communist party paper, said the parachutists at one place landed in sufficient strength to permit their transport planes to alight on an air field and unload anti-tank guns, motorcycles and trench mortars.

In some cases the parachutists descended in groups of 100, it was declared, anywhere from 12 to 18 miles behind the Soviet front lines. Nevertheless, they are not being used on the scale the Germans employed in the low countries or Crete, apparently because German transport plane strength has been weakened, Pravda said.

The Soviet information bureau communique said that the Germans who had crossed the Don had succeeded in making an advance southeast of Kletskaya. In fierce fighting, but the Russians were repelling new attacks.

The invaders also have driven to the Prokhladenski area, 85 miles northeast of the oil town of Grozny, but 200 men of a Nazi mountain detachment were killed there and an attack in "many times greater" strength was repulsed, the information bureau said.

Although the Germans were throwing in large forces less than 40 miles from Stalingrad, life in that industrial center was reported continuing at a normal but fast tempo.

Factories work day and night and barges of fresh supplies unload constantly, said Pravda.

BAHR AWAITING FATE IN U.S. COURT TODAY

By The Associated Press

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 25.—Herbert K. F. Bahr, convicted renegade American who chose to cast his lot with Nazi Germany, an espionage agent in a "hostile country," awaited today a federal court sentence which may forfeit his life.

Bahr, whose stoical attitude during six days of trial on a charge of conspiracy to commit espionage was broken only when a jury returned its verdict last night, will be sentenced September 2 by Federal Judge William F. Smith. He is liable to a maximum penalty of death.

The former Buffalo resident's wife, whom he left behind when he went to Germany more than three years ago as an exchange student, collapsed a short time later, then said she had abandoned her plans to divorce him and would fight to win his freedom.

"From the moment I saw him again, all my love for him came back and now I'll fight my hardest for him," she said.

Bahr's court-appointed counsel, Frederick M. P. Pearce, announced he would appeal the verdict.

Bahr testified he had accepted espionage training by the Nazi Gestapo only because he wanted to get back to the United States CALEDONIA — Union Service Day of the First Methodist Church of Caledonia, Sat., 8:30 a.m., was the first of the year. It was a day of prayer. A general offering was collected and given to the Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Kleminger are known as the managers of the local United States Post Office. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Schow of Marion, the ceremony was performed in Greenup, Mo., Saturday Aug. 15. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Harold King, manager. The bride is a graduate of Caledonia High School and her bridegroom is employed at the Marion Steam Shovel Co. They will live with the bride's parents for the present.

It has been no small task to fill the vacated posts, most of which resulted when former teachers either took positions in war industries or accepted advancement in the educational field. The turnover of personnel at the close of the school year increased by about 10 per cent in comparing with a year ago, school officials said.

The city schools, with a normal teaching staff of 200, lost 29 instructors, according to Stupt Holl. On the county staff, with 132 members, there were 22 vacancies.

CHAPTER 12

Danger In The Jungle

THE sun had climbed almost to the meridian before the retinue got under way. One of Tyra's Indians went ahead, wielding his machete recklessly to cut a trail through the vines and brush. Behind him was Tyra. Then came the other Yaqui, and after him Sandy and Helen. Gil brought up the rear.

It was slow work hacking through the heavy jungle growth. They were following a stream, a tributary of the Rio Flamboyon, and as they ascended, the canyon became more narrow, more tangled with vegetation. The country with its bright-colored birds, butterflies and insects darting among the vivid green of the trees was just as lovely to look at as the river country had been. But, as they passed, all sorts of vicious insects dropped upon them. Again and again Helen cried out that she was bitten. At last she declared that she could stand it no longer and Sandy called Tyra to halt the cavalcade.

Tyra inspected Helen. "I'm afraid you'll have to take off those breeches," she told the older woman. "You can't wear such a costume in the bush."

"But I thought this outfit would protect me better than the shorts and sandals the rest of you wear!"

"It works the other way," Tyra said. "We can keep the insects brushed off to some extent, but when you have on tight breeches tucked into boots, you are helpless. If one of the men will loan me a pocket knife we'll retire behind a bush and I'll make some alterations."

Helen hesitated, but when Sandy unsheathed bowie knife and handed it to Tyra, Helen made no protest but followed meekly.

When they returned Helen's snug-fitting breeches had been inexpertly slashed off to expose her bare knees, and the tail of her blouse was hanging out all around.

"I feel like the old lady who had her petticoats cut off she said, and tried to laugh at herself.

Tyra looked the job over critically. "You can't do much about the boots today, but I'd advise you to get accustomed to wearing breeches. You can at least keep them shaken out."

Just then an insect was brushed onto one of Helen's legs. She gave a startled screech.

"Only a pinhole," Tyra said. "We'll have to halt once in awhile to scrape them off with moss before they start boring into our flesh. It's the only way to do. But we'll all be bitten. You became sort of immune, after awhile."

It was not cheering news, certainly, but Helen swallowed it with good grace.

"I hope I become immune quickly," she said.

Almost The Truth

So on they went. At last, late in the afternoon, they approached the head of the canyon.

Sandy noticed that Tyra began looking for a camp-site and presently she halted on a gravelly bank of the stream.

They pitched their tents, built a fire and cooked supper.

BUT Helen could not eat. She looked so haggard and exhausted that it was impossible not to feel sorry for her. She sat by the fire with a mound of cool moss from the stream and worked diligently to remove the day's accumulation of ticks. There were welts and bruises and abrasions on her body, and although the others in the party had fared no better, somehow on Helen's tender white flesh the injuries looked worse. After supper Sandy opened the medical kit and they all helped apply antiseptic and tape.

Tyra's tent was pitched at a little distance from the others, and before retiring, she came to stand by the group of three still treating their injuries beside the fire. She did not speak, but when she turned to leave, motioned with her head for Sandy to follow.

They walked down the stream bank a short distance. At last Tyra halted. In the dim light Sandy could feel her eyes upon him, probing.

"You've seen a little of what this country is like and we've scarcely begun," she said. "Mrs. Brotherton won't be able to stand the hardships, I'm afraid. Do you want to be responsible for whatever happens to her?"

Sandy said carefully, "It isn't a question of my wanting to be responsible. Whatever this expedition goes—Helen Brotherton goes, too, that's all. I could tell you . . ."

But Tyra interrupted, in haste,

"I understand without having you draw a picture, Mr. Morse."

On an impulse, which was wholly uncontrollable, Sandy reached out and laid a hand on her arm.

"Tyra, why aren't you frank with me? Why don't you tell me the reason for this strange attitude you've taken with us?" Is there anything to be gained by mystery now? You can trust me, I swear. If your reason for objecting to this expedition is—well, reasonable, I'll not bother you any longer."

She stood very still under the light pressure of his touch. Then Sandy felt a shudder pass through her body. She moved away a step.

"I can tell you no more than I've already told you," she said, in a detached voice.

In that brief space before she spoke Sandy could have sworn that she was on the point of telling the truth. But it hadn't come off. Another part of her had evidently conque ed. He breathed with resignation.

"Very well. Let's go back to camp."

Vanished!

Almost at once Sandy crawled into his tent. He was more tired than he ever remembered being in all his life before. He guessed that it was not entirely due to carrying a heavy pack through a jungle, but that the toxins from all his bites were creating a mild poison in his body. He stretched out thankfully and was soon fast asleep. A piece of paper lay on top of the tent. Sandy knew exactly what it was before he walked over to it.

She had written—

"Don't try to follow me, G-back at once."

Sandy was under his breath

it was a strong word to matur

the occasion.

He crumpled the note in his hand and started up the canyon. His gravel road went in a hard line. So she had raced him. She had brief sessions to arrange schedules will be held either on Labor Day or the preceding week.

Supervisors of the county schools will convene before classes begin to discuss school hours and other matters pertaining to the opening in step with wartime trends.

The use of buses, he pointed out, to classroom duties outside the schoolrooms. How this restriction may affect the inter-school athletic programs has not yet been

To make sure that the lunch contains a goodly amount of vitamins and lunch appeal and are fine partinourishment, milk and cheese are important additions to the lunch

NEW ZEALAND SENDS PRIME MINISTER HERE TO REACHES WEST COAST ON WAY TO WASHINGTON.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The office of Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand is the first to reach the West Coast of the United States since the fall of Stalingrad. The trip is being made close to our own homes and families.

What happens with the next six or eight weeks is likely to determine the course of the whole war. That is how near it is drawing us here in America.

I don't mean the fall of Stalingrad would be decisive, for we would still, it would be, make a blow against the Soviet since the city is an integral part of her military and economic defense. Its capture would mean the cutting of the expansive Volga, that artery of transport which links the Caucasus to North Russia. The fall of Stalingrad would make much more difficult the defense of that all-important Caucasus, where the Nazis also continue to force the gallant Russians back.

The bloody drama of Stalingrad stands out starkly and seems to reemphasize the fact that we in America haven't yet got the feel of this conflagration on which our survival as a nation depends. Maybe more detailed accounts of our fighting men in Russia would bring us closer to reality and build morale.

Of course we haven't got our nation on a big scale yet, but we have a lot of men in battle in various parts of the world. What wefolk home need is to be moved right into the middle of the conflicts with them—alongside them, bleed with them and die with them.

That would bring realization of our dangers of the sacrifices our boys are making of the other sacrifices needed from us and it is a grand breeding of the fighting spirit.

Example: the other night a Japanese force landed on one of the Solomons and tried to overcome our marines. A communiqué told us that "during the night only hand-to-hand fighting was possible and with the daybreak the marines were able to maneuver, and of the 700 Japanese, 670 are dead, the rest prisoners. Marine losses were 28 killed and 72 wounded."

That's all we know about this historic action. Presumably the authorities haven't more facts to give us yet, but my point is that this is the type of story which might be pressed for and given to the public in full detail while it's hot. Sure, I know all about censorship—worked under 'em in war and revolution in many countries—but the fact remains that such actions can be reported graphically and fully enough without disclosing anything which would assist the enemy.

Then there's another aspect to this situation. Quite apart from the value of such publication as a morale builder, the public is entitled to all the information which possibly can be provided. They tell us that this is a people's war—and that's right.

Brig. Gen. H. G. D. St. John had to delay the start.

Up to that time everything had been done properly, through the regular channels of reporting to Tokyo and negotiating with the French Communists in Indo-China.

Mindful, however, of the August victories of Japan's imperial majesty, the Malayan command had made a hasty decision.

We decided to go ahead without permission," the report continued. "Without this, they would have died Sunday with masses throughout the morning and a procession to the shrine park and benediction on in the afternoon. "By working day and night we were able to have it ready for use against northern Malaya when the war finally started Dec. 8 (it was the Pacific time when Japan attacked Pearl Harbor).

Nov. 3, it will be remembered, was only two days before Kitaishi was on his flight to Washington.

Immediately after the outbreak of war the 12,000 Jews receiving relief in Shanghai had to be cut down to 8,000. Now this figure has been slashed to 5,000 with little hope of obtaining enough funds to feed even this number this winter.

ABOARD S. S. GRIMSHAW

AUG. 25.—The Pacific war almost started a month earlier and in a different way. Only the stubbornness of some French officials in Indo-China and, apparently, special Ambassador Saburo Kurusu, kept the war from breaking out.

This was disclosed by the official report of an unidentified member of the Japanese general staff in Malaya to his superiors at imperial headquarters. This report, which bore no name, was published early in May in the Tokyo Nippon Shimbun.

The attack was scheduled to start Nov. 3, "Meiji-sai," or memorial day for Emperor Meiji, but in September and October for the plan to proceed.

It will include members of the Ohio division from Columbus, local game protectors and field men and sportsmen and farmers of the vicinity. The broadcasts will cover hunting, fishing and general conservation. Tomorrow's program will be presented by Raymond B. Howard director of public relations for the Ohio division, and Bob Marshall.

Cards Crush French and Dodgers, 7-1, in First of Four-Game Series

Max Lanier Allows Loop Leaders Only Four Hits; Red Birds Need Sweep of Series.

By The Associated Press

THE St. Louis Cardinals may not have any more chance of catching the Brooklyn Dodgers than the slow train through Arkansas has of overtaking the Broadway Limited, but Billy Southworth has the throttle wide open.

His Red Birds tumbled the Dodgers 7-1 last night before an enthusiastic turnout of 25,582 St. Louis fans who turned out for the first of a four-game series. It was the tenth triumph in 11 games for the Cardinals and kept alive their hope for the National league pennant.

Actually it did no great damage to the Dodgers, who breezed into the Mound City with a record of 10 victories in their last dozen games and a 7½-game lead. All Brooklyn needs at St. Louis is an even split to make the September stretch serene. The Dodgers still have that chance.

They also have the comfort of knowing that the closing days of the season will be spent in the pleasant company of the Phils and the Boston Braves, from whom Brooklyn has won 25 out of 33 games.

To tear a really gaping hole in the Dodgers' padding at the top of the league the Cardinals would have to sweep the series. And they tackled the strenuous assignment last night with a full head of steam.

They blasted Lefty Larry French and two successors for a dozen hits, pulled off a double steal that scored a run, and adequately suppressed the Dodgers on four-hit hurling by Southpaw Max Lanier.

The little left-hander practically coasted to his 12th victory of the season.

French, winner of 13 games and beaten only once previously this season (also by the Cardinals) listed just-five frames.

This was the only game scheduled in either major league yesterday. The same rivals play another game tonight, then have twilight engagements the next two days.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Football Dangers

In my collection of newspaper clippings of reports of injuries, deaths, blindness and amputations that resulted from football games last year, I find that not only the players, but the innocent bystander may suffer.

Five referees or officials got too near the fray for comfort last year. I quote from an Ohio newspaper for Nov. 21, 1941: "The contest was marred by a mishap that befell Referee X. In the third quarter he had a leg fractured when he was knocked down by a couple of gridironers."

An old gentleman was walking with his granddaughter near a football field in a public park when the ball went out of bounds and the players came swarming over him, knocking him down, breaking an arm and injuring the little girl.

The danger to spectators may grow so that the grandstand will be moved a quarter of a mile from the playing field and the game will have to be observed with binoculars. They will make just as much sense out of it because never has there been evolved a more boring or stupid game.

I have gone to games with men who were stars as recently as 1930 and officials until 1935 and when asked what such or such a play or penalty meant, they said they didn't know, but would read about it in the papers in the morning. The rule book is so stuffed with penalties that it looks like the Encyclopedia Britannica.

But, of course, football hardens men so that they can stand anything in after-life. Oh, yes! About half of one per cent of any student body gets the benefit of this healthy sport. But think how fortunate they are. Listen from a Wyoming newspaper for Oct. 16, 1941: "X, well-known athlete who has spent two and a half years recovering from a broken back due to a football accident, while leaning over to tie his shoe lace snapped his spine again."

In other words, football hardens you so that even leaning over to tie your shoe breaks your back.

It may be this year that we have enough inevitable trouble with death and maiming of our youth, so that school and college associations will decide to cancel all football contests for the season or even for the duration, which means at least five years. If so, I predict that they will never go back to it. For an autumn athletic open air contest, they could easily substitute soccer football—a good healthy game, interesting to the spectators and a thousand times safer than our ridiculous "game"—American Football.

Welcome the Belleville, Illinois, Dad's Club to the ranks of those who see the dangers. They voted last year to request school authorities not to let any 19-year-old boys play football.

To find what kinds of paper are most durable for making paper money the United States Bureau of Engraving and Printing has started a bulletin that subjects notes to as much wear in a few minutes as it would receive in years of use.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

"I SHALL BE very glad to transfer the responsibility to your shoulders," I told her, then went back to the room where I had enjoyed so refreshingly a nap.

But any notion of snatching more slumber was shattered when I met Dicky coming down the corridor. He was so plainly a messenger sent in to see upon some urgent errand that involuntarily I squared my shoulders to meet whatever task he was bringing.

"Dad and Ronald are down stairs," he said, "and rarely have I seen the Chief in such a wretched mood. Luckily, he's only just arrived, so come along down. Old Harry's already there."

He fairly rushed me down to the library where my father rose with Harry and Ronald at our entrance. Then my father came over to me.

"Where is Carolyn?" he asked. "She is talking to Lillian." "How is she reacting? Is she tractable, or rebellious?"

I did not wish to answer this question fully before Ronald, or narrow further the sensibilities of Carolyn's distraught brother, so I hedged carefully.

"She appears to be all right," I said, "and she and Lillian are absorbed in their talk."

"I am leaving Ronald here while Carolyn stays," said my father. "Harry says he can put him up. With Harry and Miss Whitlock here, I do not think Lillian will need you—or will she?"

I knew his question, between the lines, ran "Will you arrange to see that Carolyn is kept from escaping while you are away?" and I gave him the assurance he expected.

Demandy Haste

"I know she will not," I said, and although he did not actually heave a sigh of relief, he conveyed that effect.

"Then," he said quickly, "I would like to have you and Richard come back to the hotel with me now. Please make your farewells to Lillian and Carolyn brief, for I am in great haste."

"I'll be right back," I promised, then raced up the stairs, where I found Miss Whitlock in the hall.

"You'll have to take over," I told her. "Carolyn's brother will stay here, but neither he nor Mrs. Underwood has any idea of what that young woman is capable. She will first try jealousy on them. If that fails, she has innumerable other schemes. And she is very clever, very wily."

"Mrs. Underwood knows all about her," I went on. "You can confide in him, and ask him for help. But until we take her away, we are coupling on you to keep her safely here, even if you have to put her into a straitjacket."

"I have found that a most efficient device occasionally," she said with a grin.
